

TREKKING ON CAPRI

Half Day excursion

some of Italy's best trekking routes

The Island of Capri offers some of Italy's best trekking routes, with its many paths leading you to hidden parts of the island where you can enjoy its marvelous nature and spectacular views. Your trip starts with a pleasant 40-minute walk along the narrow streets of Capri to Villa Jovis, where the Emperor Tiberius ruled the Roman Empire during the summer months.

Your next stop will be the Natural Arch and Punta Tragara, the best location to admire the Faraglioni, one of the most famous symbols of Capri. The Faraglioni are three blocks of rock, which have survived coastal landslides and erosion by the sea. The rocks have each been given a name: the first, still attached to the land, is Stella, the second, Faraglione di Mezzo, is separated from the first block by a stretch of sea, and the third, Faraglione di Fuori or Scopolo, is the head or promontory stretching out into the sea.

On your way back to the center of the island, you will visit the Augustus Gardens where Emperor Augustus spent his time during his holidays on the island. From this point, there are two alternative paths you can follow: either down Via Krupp, the road built in 1902 by Emilio Mayer, characterized by its zigzag streets leading down to Marina Piccola for a swim, or up a path to reach the highest point on the island, Monte Solaro (587meters) in Anacapri.

The descent from Monte Solaro can be done either by chairlift or on foot down the narrow streets of Anacapri for some souvenir shopping and then down the "Phoenician steps" to Marina Grande where your tour will conclude.
